KEEP ON Backing the Attack! WITH WAR BONDS

DUTCH ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCES have waited four years for the invasion, are now part of the Allied Expeditionary Forces smashing into occupied Europe. Trained and toughened in England, now fighting beside U. S., British, Canadians and other United Nations troops, they have an immediate objective—the liberation of Holland.

Camp Sponsored By Cone Y. Ended After A Week's Period At Each Branch

The annual Stay-at-Home camp sponsored by the Boy's Department of the Cone Memorial Y.M.C.A. ended Saturday morning, July 1st., after a week's period at each branch. Ninety-seven boys and leaders were in daily attendance during the camp. The program schedule was as follows: Flag Raising and Setting-up Exercises, Bible Talk, Craft and Hobby period, Games and Nature Lore, Pep Talk, Swimming.

Reverends Vaughn, Clay and Sisk gave the Bible talks. Pep talks were given by Mr. H. A. Barnes, Clarence Cone, James Bangle, H. M. Angel and A. S. Arnold.

The following boys were enrolled.

D. Holder, Albert Phillips, Jerry Ferguson, Irie Perdue, Billy Perdue, and Leaders Wayne Cates Herbert Smith, Bob Weaver, Arlindo Lineberry, Bobby Ward, Bill Smith, Harold Poe, Edward Morris, Gene Bryson and Leanard Bell.

Three over-night hikes was planned and the boys slept out in the woods with the trees and the sky as a roof for their bedroom and the birds as their alarm clock. This proved to be a great feature with the campers.

Local Learn To Swim Campaign Successful

Fifty-eight boys of the two branches of the Cone Memorial Y. learned to swim during the month of June Learn-to-Swim periods. The ages of the boys ranged from 7 to 15 years.

Almost one hundred percent of the boys in our community over 12 years of age have learned to swim in the pool at the Y. before they reached the twelve year mark. It is nothing unusual to see numbers of little fellows 7 and 8 years swimming with ease during the regular swimming periods for younger boys. All swimming periods are attended by large groups of boys during these warm days.

'Cotton At War' Film To Be Shown Sunday Night

Plans For Showing Of Picture Featuring Use Of Cotton Fabrics In War Are Completed; Will Be Shown In Field Between Revolution-Print Works

Final plans for the Sunday night showing of the films, "Cotton At War", and "The Army Air Forces Report", have been completed, and the program will begin at 8:30 P.M. in the field between Rvolution Mill and Proximity Print Works. The films, describing actual battle scenes and the use of cotton fabrics in war, will be the feature part of a patriotic rally sponsored by the war department, the Textile Ministerial Association, the Cone Memorial YMCA, and the local mill managements.

Following a short prayer arranged by the Textile Ministerial Association, the films will be shown under the supervision of Mr. Arnold, of the YMCA. Music will be furnished by the local overseas replacement depot band, which will begin their program of music at 8:30. The films were brought here for local showings through the courtesy of the Quartermaster Department of the United States Army and the Greensboro Camp O.R.D. of the Army Air Force. "Cotton At War", in combat and training scenes, shows in a dramatic manner what would happen to the Allied war effort if we lacked the vital cotton materials that form an integral unit and go into practically everything that shoots, flies, floats, rolls or walks, and how each unit would be useless without it.

There will be no admission charge for the program, and the field will afford ample accommodation to everyone who wishes to attend. Not only is everybody invited to attend, but it is believed that a good attendance will definitely help the war effort.

Revolution Pressure Canner Available

The seasons have been bad and the gardens have suffered from the drouth, which makes it more important that we let nothing go to waste.

Use all the garden-fresh vegetables on our tables that our families need, but can for next winter all the rest.

Gather vegetables while they are young and tender, just as we like to eat them, remembering that "we never take a better product out of the jar than we put into it".

Because, by using the pressure canner, the temperature can be higher, our State Department of Agriculture recommends that the pressure canner be used for all non-acid vegetables, as string beans, limas, squash, beets and okra. Hot-water bath should be used for tomatoes and all fruits.

Mrs. Bob Bennett pressure canned fourteen quarts of string beans.

Mrs. Mack Fulk pressure canned seven quarts of string beans.

Mrs. G. H. Hammer used hot-water bath method and canned 13½ quarts of peaches and 7 pints of blackberries.

Mrs. Steele will help any one who will give her the pleasure. State Department bulletins on canning methods are available for all.

U. S. Employment Office Checking Absenteeism

Request Information From Mills As To The Individual Causes Of Being Absent

The Greensboro office of the United States Employment Service is requesting detailed information as to causes of absenteeism. Individual reasons for absences from work are being carefully studied by the Employment Service and the War Manpower Commission in an all-out effort to make possible an increase in badly needed production of essential textiles.

The Greensboro office is requesting a weekly detailed report showing each absence, as it is felt by the officials that the information is needed in making a complete study of the situation.

The Employment Service is seriously concerned about the word days lost, particularly since this area is now considered a labor shortage area and the greatest possible practical utilization of manpower and womanpower in this section is necessary in order to prevent a continuation of machinery stoppage caused by absences from work.

The Yardstick For Others

Too frequently people make it their business to set up a yardstick for others, but too few people are willing to try that yardstick on themselves. Just how liberal is a person who labels himself a liberal, when by his own private personal dealings he demonstrates most remarkable reactionary traits?

We know people who profess great liberalism and who set up yardsticks which they would force on other people in their dealings and relationships, and yet, we have learned that those very people were virtual slave-drivers, everything but liberal, and most abusive in dealing with others who serve them.

We have known some such people who find great fault with others who have been fortunate enough to establish very profitable businesses, and yet, they themselves, when given an opportunity, attempt to drain the last penny out of any business transaction they engage in.

We are unable to properly classify those who advocate all types of restrictive regulations for others but demand complete freedom of action for themselves.

We have literally thousands in this country who today prescribe all types of socialistic, fascist and other types of autocratic controlled business when they would be the first to cry out if the yoke of strict control was placed around their necks. Many such people would take wealth accumulated by thrift, ingenuity, industriousness and perseverance from others but would fight to the end if someone would suggest that they be deprived of what they happened to possess.

This discourse on the failure of people to apply the yardstick they would use on others to themselves is prompted by conditions which are becoming most serious in this nation. For illustrations, we recommend reading the daily papers. Hardly a day passes but some glaring examples can be found.

If the average American citizen does not begin to watch the inconsistencies of many of those who profess to be liberals, we may find that their so-called liberalism will lead us all into an unbearable condition marked principally by the despotic rule of a few people.

We do not want it to be inferred that we label all people who call themselves liberals as inconsistent, but we do know that among those who talk loudest about their liberalism and who are ever seeking to reform others and to promote all types of share-the-wealth programs are many who would not measure up consistently if the yardstick they propose for others were applied to them.

A Factory Is Like a Tree

EXTENSION OF REMARKS
HON. FRED NORMAN
OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, April 26, 1944

Mr. NORMAN. Mr. Speaker, one of the best worded and clearest definitions of free enterprise, and all it connotes to Americans, has recently come to my attention, and I would like to call it to the attention of the House.

This reexpression of a few fundamentals of our American way of life is in the form of an advertisement inserted in a number of newspapers in my district by the Harbor Plywood Corporation, of Hoquiam, Wash. It reads as follows:

A factory is like a tree. America was built on a basic idea: That idea that a man—any man, every man—shall be master of his own destiny; the idea that a man can work a little harder than his neighbor and enjoy the fruits of that labor; the idea that ambition and courage will be rewarded.

The idea that a man can go into business for himself; the idea that he will be privileged to risk his time and his money in an enterprise of his own choosing; the idea that he can start a store or a service station or a restaurant or a factory.

A factory—that is a basic thing, like a tree. Through the chemistry of its complex workings, it produces fruit in the forms of pay rolls, and pay rolls are manna for the grocer, the baker, the doctor, the preacher, the teacher, and the whole intricate life of a community.

The sum of the factories, large and small, constitutes the forest we call industry—American industry—most potent force in the land.

A factory—it starts with a man or a group of men. Because this is America, men are not afraid. Men are willing to struggle and take risks, and from this—from this basic American idea—comes the greatest of all great rewards of industry—the creation of jobs; the creation of opportunity for the returning veteran.

Jobs; work; industrial pay rolls. They support the farmer, providing a market for his harvest; they support the merchant, creating his customers; they support the utilities, the lawyer, the banker, the newsman, the policeman, and the whole body of public servants; they support other industries and, in turn, support themselves.

They are America, and while they survive—while Americans have the freedom of opportunity and enterprise—this land will be strong.

Like a tree, the factory has roots—the deep, life-giving roots that convert labor, materials, and risk into the miracle of the American way of life.

Mr. Speaker, in modern jargon, "that says it." There are people in America—and, fortunately, I believe they are very few—who would quarrel with the fundamental ideas expressed in this advertisement. But I am certain that, as they ponder upon it, the vast majority of our people will find the unassailable truths plainly stated in this concise collection of words. I know that many will linger a little longer over one sentence:

And from this, from this basic American idea, comes the greatest of all great rewards of industry—the creation of jobs—the creation of opportunity for the returning veterans.

Most everybody likes to make money; many people would rather make money than just create jobs. In other words, with many people the main objective still is the simple collection of money, with creation of jobs and opportunities for other people as a subsidiary issue to which they give little thought. But I think that the mere chase after money for the sake of the dollars themselves is becoming a less popular sport in this country. I see signs that we Americans are growing wiser, and that we are more and more awakening to the plain fact that the best economy is that in which, like the old-fashioned Sunday school picnic, there is plenty for everybody.

We must not lose sight of the fundamental reasons why this plentitude can be maintained in America. These reasons are covered in great part by the Harbor Plywood Corporation's advertisement. I want to add a word about the man I presume directed the placing of this message before the newspaper readers of my district. He is Mr. E. W. Daniels, head of the Harbor Plywood Corporation. He is a man of courage, of vision; he is sagacious, but not greedy. I imagine that Mr. Daniels knows every word of this advertisement by heart. More than that, he practices what it preaches. Mr. Daniels—and thousands upon thousands of other Americans like him—have a fiercely burning faith in free enterprise of the good-will type which they follow. Theirs is a flame that will continue to grow until it consumes the unbelievers—the Fascists, the Communists, and all their crackpot companions.

THIS BUSINESS OF LIVING

BY SUSAN THAYER

Home-Making First

One evening recently I went to a buffet supper party given by some friends. The meal was delicious—nothing you throw together in an hour. There was a complicated jellied seafood dish, for instance, and some thin, rich pastries that take two days to make.

I learned, quite by chance, that supper was late because the woman who had been engaged to serve had just never shown up.

Afterwards our hostess sat down at the piano and played for us. A gifted musician, she had recently returned from a lecture-recital tour.

"How do you do it?" one of the guests marveled. "How can you find time to toss off a meal like this with your music and everything else you do?"

Our attractive dark-haired friend—who, by the way, is the youngest looking grandmother I know—smiled.

"I am a European," she told us. "So I cook before I do anything else.

"In Europe," she went on, "learning to cook was as much a part of a girl's education as her schooling. And I believe there would be fewer unhappy marriages if every girl were taught to put home-making before any other career.

"And I read something interesting the other day," she recalled. "I read that there is practically never any unemployment among women who do women's work!"

Well I shouldn't be surprised if she were right. Whoever heard of a good cook out of a job!

Honey Is a Natural

Seems like some foods, between the time we grow them and when we get them back again to eat, go through so many man-made processes they loose a sort of eathiness that goes with fields and farms and harvests.

But not so honey! Honey, in the comb or in the jar, is as sweet and natural as nectar. You see a bee, floating lazily over a wide-lipped flower, dipping its nose to drink deep of the sweets. And you know this nectar will be distilled, by a kind of simple magic, into honey in the hive. Later, it may go to market, to be strained and purified. But from your own combs, or in the packaged product, it still tastes of sunny fields and flowers delicate with dew.

For this very reason, to cook with honey has proved a wartime economy turned pleasure. For honey is so much more than just a substitute for sugar. Honey is an item in itself, and must be reckoned with as such. It has a certain liquid content that, when handled properly, improves the texture of your baking. It adds a delicacy of flavor that is discernible in every kind of dish. And it has a flowery fragrance that seems to hover lightly over foods with which it's used.

Try these honey recipes and see:

Orange Honey Jelly

Blend, then heat to boiling—
- 1¼ cups honey
- ½ cup orange juice, strained
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice, strained.

Stir in—
- ½ cup bottled fruit pectin.

Bring again to a full rolling boil. Remove at once from heat, strain and pour into sterilized glasses. Cover with melted paraffin. Yield: 2 8-oz glasses.

Honey Breakfast Muffins

Sift together—
- ½ cup sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons baking powder.

Add, mixing thoroughly—
- ½ cup whole wheat flour.

Combine—
- 1 egg, well beaten
- ¼ cup orange juice
- 1 teaspoon grated orange rind
- ½ cup honey
- 3 tablespoons melted shortening.

Make a depression in center of dry ingredients, then pour in liquid ingredients all at once. Stir only enough to dampen dry ingredients. Bake in well-greased muffin pans in a hot oven (400 deg.F.) 15-20 minutes. Serves six.

Variation:: ½ cup seedless raisins may be added if desired.

Honey Lemon Fluff Pie

Combine in top of double boiler—
- ½ cup cornstarch
- ⅔ cup honey
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups cold water.

Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened.

Place mixture over hot water, cover, and cook for 15 minutes.

Combine—
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 3 egg yolks, lightly beaten.

Gradually add hot mixture.

Add—
- ⅓ cup lemon juice
- Grated rind of 1 lemon.

Beat until stiff but not dry—
- 3 egg whites.

Fold egg whites into lemon mixture. Pour filling into—
- 1 9-inch baked pie shell.

Sprinkle top with—
- Cake crumbs. Serves 6.

Attendance -- June 19 to 25

Vacation is over but we still have some sunburn, a good fish story, and an empty pocket-book as souvenirs. We hope you all got back safely and promptly and in no worse shape.

We also hope that Revolution attendance isn't going to drop off any more than it has (all three other mills had slight improvements for the week of July 19 to 25). And we hope that Proximity's Second Shift Spinning will get off the bottom and give someone else a chance at the booby prize. And we hope that there will soon be more hundred percenters like Print Works' Napping and Chemical Departments, White Oak's third shift Dyeing, Proximity's Shipping, and Revolution's first shift Napping and first shift Dyeing. There are some other good ones in there too. All three card rooms are doing well on the first shift and Revolution Carding is doing well on the Second.

Let's stay on the job. If you don't need money, there are still bonds for sale and you can't beat them for saving and investment. They can help you buy that new car after the war.

Reading & Writing

by Edwin Seaver & Robin McKown

If awards were given to the most dangerous fictional woman of the year, Ben Ames Williams would surely win the prize for his creation of Ellen, in his novel, "Leave Her to Heaven."

Ellen is a gal whom all wise men would do well to avoid, but they don't do it. She's pretty and witty and charming—when she wants to be. But when she loves anyone, she must own them, and her jealousy knows no bounds.

She resents it when her novelist husband spends time at his writing desk, as a result of which there are no more novels. But that's not the half of it. Her fury rises to a high peak at his tender affection for his crippled younger brother Danny, and she doesn't rest until she has talked the lad into taking a swim across the lake, too much for his feeble strength. Her jealousy turns toward her foster-sister Ruth next, and the vengence she plans for her is diabolical beyond belief. Read it for yourself if you would know more.

"Leave Her to Heaven" is pretty sure to be a popular novel, and has already been bought by the motion pictures.

In his book, "Heaven Below" E. H. Clayton, an American missionary, describes some of the methods used by the Chinese underground in occupied Hangchow. Once he happened to see a Chinese engaged in the job of pasting up Japanese propaganda posters. "Aren't you very ashamed of yourself?" asked the American. "No," the Chinese replied. "You see, I put the posters up in the afternoon and get paid for them. I earn my living that way. Then I tear them all down at night. That's my real job."

"Basic History of the United States" by Charles and Mary Beard has been set aside by the Book-of-the-Month Club as a future book-dividend for subscribers.

"People in the postwar world will be very much the same as they are today. There will be little change in the fundamentals that govern their activities."—Robert M. Gaylord, pres., National Association of Manufacturers.

Wartime Homemaker Aids

Homemaking Specialists of the General Electric Consumers Institute

HOW TO FREEZE
SNAP BEANS

Here is the method for freezing snap beans recommended by Donald K. Tressler, Manager of the General Electric Consumers Institute and the country's foremost authority on the freezing of foods.

"The quality of the vegetable selected for freezing is of prime importance," says Dr. Tressler. The vegetable should be harvested and prepared for freezing just at the peak of maturity. Neither overmature nor undermature vegetables will give a fine frozen product. Freezing does not improve the vegetable. Start with a good one and the frozen product will be excellent.

Harvest

Harvest snap beans when young and tender, before seeds and strings develop. Arrange to freeze them as soon as possible after picking to retain goodness. If they cannot be prepared for freezing at once, hold them in the electric refrigerator.

The Kentucky Wonder variety is the best for freezing. Other satisfactory varieties are the Blue Lake, Lowe's Champion, Giant Stringless Green Pod, Wisconsin Refugee and Pencil Pod Wax.

Scald

Snap beans and sort them, eliminating those which are mature and stringy. Wash the snap beans carefully, then break or cut them into one inch lengths or slice lengthwise (French style). Scald (precook) no more than one pound of beans at a time in rapidly boiling water in a 6 to 12 quart kettle, filling the pan three-quarters full. Place the beans in a colander or wire basket. Immerse the basket in the boiling water, moving it up and down constantly so as to agitate the beans during scalding. Time the scalding period carefully, counting scalding time only from the moment the water comes to a full rolling boil after the beans have been immersed in the water. Scald 2 minutes.

Cool Immediately

Immediately plunge the scalded snap beans in running cold water or water containing ice.

Running cold water (no warmer than 60 degrees F.) is preferred where it is available as it will cool the beans quicker. When using water containing ice, have sufficient ice on hand to be added to the water as it becomes warm.

Package

When snap beans are cooled (approximately 5 minutes) drain for a few seconds then pour immediately into waiting container.

The heavily waxed cartons or the two piece carton consisting of a cellophane liner which is inserted into a rectangular paper carton are recommended for packaging frozen snap beans.

Freeze

Do not allow produce to become warm after packaging. If freezing facilities are not on hand, place the packaged snap beans in the electric refrigerator and when all beans are packaged, transfer to the freezing facilities at the locker plant. If the plant is more than half hour's distant, pack in corrugated box for transfer.

If you have a freezing cabinet, do not overcrowd packages in the freezer. Allow ample space for free air circulation around all packages not in direct contact with freezing surfaces.

Frozen Foods Booklet

To prepare other vegetables, fruits and meats write to the General Electric Consumers Institute, Dept. GN-43, Bridgeport, Conn., for the free 24-page booklet, "Frozen Foods—How to Prepare, Package, Freeze, Cook."
